Belgrade Hints That
Germans May Offer
French Peace

BUCHAREST, May 22—The Rumanian government today cancelled all military leaves and ordered all reservists to join their army units by May 23.

There was no official explanation, but rumors of a Russian mobilization on the German-Hungarian frontier were discounted in official quarters.

Simultaneously, all Yugoslavs in Rumania were rushing back to their homeland tonight, apparently in response to a call tantamount to a general mobilization order.

Likewise, Jews started a general exodus from the Balkans late today.

At the same time, it was revealed that Alexander Romulo, life-long friend of King Carol, will be named Rumanian ambassador to Berlin to supplant Radu Crutzes-cu. Also, it was learned that M. Peyrouton, current French ambassador to the Argentine, will become ambassador to Rumania.

BELGRADE, May 22—Yugoslavian political circles said today they expect Germany to offer France a separate peace during the next few days.

Similar rumors were heard at Budapest. According to the rumors, the offer may be made in order to leave Germany free to concentrate her military energies against Britain alone.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Unconfirmed rumors circulated last night in Rome to the effect that France is diplomatically sounding out the possibility of making a separate peace with the Reich. Anglo-French diplomatic circles in Rome termed these rumors a propaganda maneuver designed to use withdrawal of British troops from the war zone as the basis for driving a wedge between Paris and London.)

TWO PICK CENTRAL PARK FOR THEIR SUICIDE PACT

NEW YORK, May 22—Margaret Rasch, 21, of suburban Belaire, was found mortally wounded and her companion, John O'Leary, 25, of uptown Manhattan, was found critically wounded on the dew-wet grass of Central Park early today.

Near their unconscious forms, when found, lay a revolver, twice discharged, and a note-book of typewritten poetry. On the back-leaf of the book was penned these words:

"We are very much in love, but we cannot get married and this way is better. We cannot go on longer apart."

They were taken to Roosevelt Hospital where the girl died a few hours later. Death of O'Leary, who police said was married, was expected momentarily.

The German air force personnel is three times larger than the combined forces of all the nations of the western hemisphere. Great Britain's Royal Air Force ranks next to the Germans in size.

LANDON ARRIVES Red Cross Appeals For FOR F. D. PARLEY Chapter To Furnish Aid

1936 G. O. P. Nominee Keeps Silent About Offer Of Post In Cabinet

WASHINGTON, May 22—Former Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, 1936 Republican standard bearer, arrived in Washington today for lunch with President Roosevelt as reports persisted that the administration contemplates a "coalition" cabinet to direct the nation's three-billion dollar defense program.

Landon, mentioned in some quarters as possible secretary of war, was on record in advance of his meeting with the President as opposed to such a move.

And when he left his train at Union station this morning—laughing, chatting and shaking hands all around with trainmen, reporters and photographers that he knew—the Kansan's only comment on the questions of the war secretaryship and a coalition defense cabinet was:

"I'm resting on my prior statements. And I'm not going to discuss."

OHIO SOLON CITED AS SALESMAN OF FEDERAL POSTS

YOUNGSTOWN, May 22—Charges that Congressman Michael J. Kirwan, Youngstown Democrat, "sold" Ohio postmaster's jobs to be aired at a hearing Saturday. Among a dozen witnesses subpoenaed today were former U. S. Senator Robert J. Bulkley and Carl W. Armstrong, former Youngstown postmaster.

Dallas Roger, Trumbull County justice of the peace, and nine other postmasters also were summoned.

The charges against Kirwan were based on affidavits made by Thomas McCabe, Jr., Youngstown, that Kirwan wanted $800 to recommend the appointment of Harry Dixon to the Warren postmaster's job in 1938.

M McCabe named Edwin H. Gensler, Kirwan's campaign manager, and Dixon as conspirators and all three pleaded not guilty last week. Kirwan claimed the accusations were part of a political plot.

PLANE FALL KILLS OHIOAN

EAST LIVERPOOL, May 22—J. Richard Coleman, 26, was killed last night when the private plane he was flying crashed to a highway near Swaney airport at East Liverpool.

With the Pickaway County Red Cross chapter attempting to raise $2,000 as its quota for the campaign, Carl C. Leist, county chairman, received a telegram Wednesday from the National Red Cross headquarters in Washington, urging him to reach and oversubscribe the $2,000 goal.

Recent events in Europe among the French and Belgian people have greatly increased relief needs, it pointed out. Chairman Leist has called a meeting of the local chapter for Thursday evening in the Relic Room of Memorial Hall at 7:15.

FOUR AMERICAN AMBULANCE MEN LOST IN FRANCE

PARIS, May 22—The disappearance of four American ambulance workers and the wounding of another were revealed today in an American field service report. Two ambulances in the American unit also were lost, the report said.

The missing were Donald Q. Coster, 23, of New York; John Clement, 26, of Brookline, Mass.; George F. G. King, 31, of New York; and Gregory H. Wait, 39, of Shelbourne, Vt.

Wait is married and has twin sons. King also is married. The wounded American was listed as Francis Peabody, 22, of Hamlin, N. Y. His injuries were not believed serious.

The missing were last seen a few miles south of a town now in German hands. Other ambulance unit members driving wounded in a southerly direction informed Coster, who was chief of the section, that the nearest city was in flames and under heavy bombardment.

Coster was said to have insisted on carrying on in the direction of that city. He was not thereafter reported.

The possibility still existed, however, that the group of Americans may have encountered difficulties or delays in rejoining their section and hope has not been lost for them, according to ambulance unit officials.

LUTHERAN BIBLE SCHOOL CLASSES TO START JUNE 4

The fourteenth annual Trinity Lutheran Bible school will start June 4, Dr. G. J. Troutman, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran church, announced Wednesday. The meetings which start at 8:30 a. m. will be held in the Parish House, from National Red Cross headquarters follows:

"With several million men locked in mortal combat on French and Belgian soil the relief needs of Belgian and French peoples are reaching staggering proportions. Already five million pitiful refugees are clogging every road into central and southern France trying to escape bombing and strafing from airplanes.

"Our representatives in France report thousands dying by roadside of wounds, fright and hunger.

"American Red Cross must rush relief of every kind if these innocent people are to be saved. We are expediting millions of dollars in money and supplies, but we need more and bigger contributions to carry on.

"Cannot urge on you too strongly need for prompt action if we are to befriend these sorely tried victims of brutal warfare. MAN QUESTIONED AFTER LOITERING AT U. S. ARMORY

COLUMBUS, May 22—Federal agents today took over questioning of a man who said he was a graduate of the University of Berlin and who was arrested "under suspicious circumstances" in the vicinity of a Columbus national guard armory.

The man said he was Julius Fleishman, 37. His attorney, Stanley Schwartz, said Fleishman was a scientist who has been experimenting with atom-smashing and the development of a new photographic film.

In his room, officers said, was a profusion of radio apparatus, including a dismantled transmitter although records showed no amateur license issued in his name.

After questioning Fleishman, city police called in FBI men to examine him.

Next Few Weeks Certain To

LONDON, May 22—The British government today announced conscription of the entire man-power and material resources of the nation in the desperate struggle against Nazi Germany.

A bill empowering King George to take over the services of every person within the United Kingdom as well as his or her private property in defense of the country will be pushed through all stages tomorrow.

Announcement of this move, taken "not in a spirit of panic" but because of the "grave peril" threatening the country, was made in the House of Commons by Major Richard Clement Attlee, lord privy seal.

"It is necessary that the government should be given complete control over all persons and property," he said.

"The whole resources of the country must be thrown into the struggle."

The emergency measures are not due to panic, Attlee declared, but are dictated by the "grave peril" in which England stands.

Situation Critical

"The present situation is so critical," Attlee said, "that the government is compelled to seek special powers."

"The situation is grave. Every member is fully aware of the issues at stake."

BISHOP HOBSON WOULD PUT U. S. ON ALLIED SIDE

CINCINNATI, May 22—Delegates to the Southern Ohio diocesan convention of the Episcopal Church today weighed a speech of their bishop, Henry W. Hobson, in which he urged that the United States enter the European war on the side of the Allies.

Hobson declared that America should abandon "sham neutrality" to help Britain and France, first with wealth and supplies and then, if necessary, with lives.

"Can we sit in pseudo neutrality and run the great danger of having a Nazi victory destroy the liberty of a free people?" the bishop asked.

Hobson then quoted from a recent statement, which he had signed, and which he said partly expressed his convictions:

"We urge that the United States immediately enlist its moral and material resources in support of allied nations. We believe that such assistance offers the best hope of avoiding either military involvement in this war, or a later single-handed encounter with victorious totalitarian powers, east and west," the statement said.

CYCLIST, 22, INJURED

Ernest Sells, 22, of Laurelville, suffered minor but painful injuries Tuesday evening when an automobile driver made a left turn in front of his motorcycle. BERLIN CLAIMS DRIVE GOES ON

Mechanized Move To Port
Area Widens; New Gains
Being Reported

BERLIN, May 22—The German mechanized drive toward the bustling channel ports from which England's fate may be decided widened today as new gains were recorded in the southward drive toward Paris, according to the Nazi high command.

Today's communique disclosed that the onslaught against the channel was embracing a wide area north of Abbeville, seized by the Germans yesterday.

The spearhead now seems to be aimed at Boulogne, directly across the channel from Folkestone, England, and possibly from there to Calais—where Dover lies but 25 miles away.

The communique said: "The German drive on the channel coast has been enlarged in a northwesterly direction toward St. Pol, Montreuil and Samer."

"The German air force again successfully attacked the ports of Ostend, Dunkerque, Calais, Boulogne and Dieppe."

"The enemy is still stubbornly resisting in Flanders in order to protect its retreat from the Escaut."

"Near Valenciennes, the German attack against densely packed forces of French troops continues, with stubborn battles in progress."

"We repulsed enemy attempts to break through southward by way of Arras."

"Near Arras, Junkers and Stuka (dive-bombing) planes contributed essentially to frustrating attacks by British tanks."

CAROL'S FRIEND ON WAY TO U. S., CONGRESS HEARS

WASHINGTON, May 22—Reports that Magda Lupescu, red-headed companion of King Carol of Rumania, is enroute to this country brought quick repercussions in congress today.

Rep. Allen (D) La., immediately made a demand that the labor department forbid her entry.

"She took control of King Carol and lived with him as his wife," Allen declared. "She is an undesirable—Is the congress of the United States going to stand by and permit her to come in?"

Allen said he was studying possible legislation to bar Madame Lupescu. She is said to have had a rift with her royal consort and to be planning residence in this country.

The Louisiana made the demand as he urged the house rules committee to send to the floor his bill to deport Harry Bridges, Australian born west coast CIO leader.

Premier Reynaud Declares Month Vital;
Nazis Continuing Campaign Toward Capture Of Channel Districts

THREE LORRAINE TOWNS BOMBED

Commander-In-Chief Full Of Confidence If
All Do Duty; Paris Draws Sigh Of Relief;
Sweeping Activity Expected Soon

LONDON, May 22—In recapturing Arras, French forces have cut off the rear of the furthestmost German light motorized column at Abbeville, the London Star quoted a French military spokesman as saying today.

PARIS, May 22—A surge of relief, tempered with caution and the realization that many hard tasks lie ahead, swept over Paris today with announcement that French troops have recaptured Arras, one of the key points seized by the Germans yesterday in their drive toward the English Channel.

A short while later, Premier Paul Reynaud went on the air with the reassurance that if the Allies can hold out for a month, they will have traversed three-quarters of the road to victory.

And he added, the French will hold on as long as necessary.

Reynaud's statement as well as the brief communique itself made clear that the reoccupation of Arras was but one small phase of the gigantic attempts now being made by the Allies to counteract the initial Nazi advantage.

The communique said: "Arras is now in our hands."

The communique indicated, however, that the Germans were still keeping up their drive toward the coast and channel ports.

In addition, it revealed that the French bombarded three towns behind the German front in retaliation for an asserted German bombardment on three towns behind the French front in Lorraine.

A military spokesman refused to reveal names of the three Lorraine towns.

With regard to Abbeville at the mouth of the Somme and only 15 miles from the channel coast proper which the Germans claimed to have taken yesterday, the French war ministry denied the town was ever captured.

"It was merely that some motorcycle units entered the town," a spokesman said in reply to the German claim.

Nazi advance units are similarly moving out of many other places due to the weakness of their effectives, it was said.

"Enemy pressure continued in the direction of the coast, taking the form of raids carried out by small, motorized detachments," the French communique stated.

Towns Bombarded
"In Lorraine the enemy having bombarded three towns behind our front, we retaliated on three towns behind the German front."

In his brief talk, Reynaud did everything in his power to reinforce the French morale.

"The commander-in-chief said to (Continued on Page Four)"

IRONTON LOSES 281 IN 10 YEARS, CENSUS SHOWS

COLUMBUS, May 22—The city of Ironton, Lawrence County, had a population loss of 281 persons during the last 10 years, a preliminary census report disclosed today. Enumerators counted 15,840 persons in the city this year as compared with 16,121 in 1930.

ADMIRAL URGES SOLONS TO VOTE BIG NAVY FUND

WASHINGTON, May 22—Urging further expansion of the navy, Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, today told congress that "we must be ready not only to protect our home coasts, but for operations in the distant Atlantic and distant Pacific as well."

He made the statement before the house naval affairs committee in support of a proposed increase of 7,000 planes and 13,000 pilots in the naval air force, as congress pushed President Roosevelt's $3,000,000,000 defense program toward enactment. Admiral Stark said:

"We have in the world today tragic examples of unpreparedness. Wishful thinking has been replaced by cold facts. It once was thought 'it can't happen here'. We now know that 'it can happen here'."

"We can put our trust only in ourselves. Nations desiring peace must be stronger than nations desiring war."

WEATHER BUREAU WARNS OF STORM IN ATLANTIC

WASHINGTON, May 22—The U. S. weather bureau today reported a storm centered about 225 miles east-southeast of Cape Hatteras, N. C., moving northward and ordered storm warnings displayed on the Atlantic coast from the cape to Eastport, Me.

The bureau said that the storm is moving about 25 to 28 miles an hour, accompanied by strong winds over a rather wide area and moderate gales up to about 50 miles per hour.

The warning said that the disturbance will continue to move northward or slightly north-northeastward and cause moderate gales on the southern New England coast tonight.

A short while later, Premier Paul Reynaud went on the air with the reassurance that if the Allies can hold out for a month, they will have traversed three-quarters of the road to victory.

And he added, the French will hold on as long as necessary.

Reynaud's statement as well as the brief communique itself made clear that the reoccupation of Arras was but one small phase of the gigantic attempts now being made by the Allies to counteract the initial Nazi advantage.

The communique said: "Arras is now in our hands."

The communique indicated, however, that the Germans were still keeping up their drive toward the coast and channel ports.

In addition, it revealed that the French bombed three towns behind the German front in retaliation for an asserted German bombardment on three towns behind the French front in Lorraine.

A military spokesman refused to reveal names of the three Lorraine towns.

With regard to Abbeville at the mouth of the Somme and only 15 miles from the channel coast proper which the Germans claimed to have taken yesterday, the French war ministry denied the town was ever captured.

"It was merely that some motorcycle units entered the town," a spokesman said in reply to the German claim.

Nazi advance units are similarly moving out of many other places due to the weakness of their effectives, it was said.

"Enemy pressure continued in the direction of the coast, taking the form of raids carried out by small, motorized detachments," the French communique stated.

Towns Bombarded
"In Lorraine the enemy having bombarded three towns behind our front, we retaliated on three towns behind the German front."

In his brief talk, Reynaud did everything in his power to reinforce the French morale.

IRONTON LOSES 281 IN 10 YEARS, CENSUS SHOWS

COLUMBUS, May 22—The city of Ironton, Lawrence County, had a population loss of 281 persons during the last 10 years, a preliminary census report disclosed today. Enumerators counted 15,840 persons in the city this year as compared with 16,121 in 1930.

ADMIRAL URGES SOLONS TO VOTE BIG NAVY FUND

WASHINGTON, May 22—Urging further expansion of the navy, Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, today told congress that "we must be ready not only to protect our home coasts, but for operations in the distant Atlantic and distant Pacific as well."

He made the statement before the house naval affairs committee in support of a proposed increase of 7,000 planes and 13,000 pilots in the naval air force, as congress pushed President Roosevelt's $3,000,000,000 defense program toward enactment. Admiral Stark said:

"We have in the world today tragic examples of unpreparedness. Wishful thinking has been replaced by cold facts. It once was thought 'it can't happen here'. We now know that 'it can happen here'."

"We can put our trust only in ourselves. Nations desiring peace must be stronger than nations desiring war."

WEATHER BUREAU WARNS OF STORM IN ATLANTIC

WASHINGTON, May 22—The U. S. weather bureau today reported a storm centered about 225 miles east-southeast of Cape Hatteras, N. C., moving northward and ordered storm warnings displayed on the Atlantic coast from the cape to Eastport, Me.

The bureau said that the storm is moving about 25 to 28 miles an hour, accompanied by strong winds over a rather wide area and moderate gales up to about 50 miles per hour.

The warning said that the disturbance will continue to move northward or slightly north-northeastward and cause moderate gales on the southern New England coast tonight.

PICKENS HINTS CHAIRMAN ROLE FOR BITTINGER

Circleville Man Declares He Will Probably Head Davey's Campaign

REPUBLICANS IN CONFA

Renick Attends Meeting Of New Central Committee; Schorr Favored

Ferd M. Pickens, Circleville native who directed the campaign of Martin L. Davey for governor in 1938, will not become chairman of the Ohio Democratic party succeeding Arthur L. Limbach, but will continue as the Democratic nominee's campaign manager in his 1940 race.

This was revealed Tuesday evening when Pickens came to Circleville to participate in an Elks' Lodge dinner and initiation meeting. In conversation with numerous friends, Pickens declared that he expected the chairmanship of the state party to go to J. Freer Bittinger of Ashland. Under the present plan of the Davey forces, Pickens will direct the campaign as the ex-governor's right hand man.

Pickens has been mentioned in many quarters as the probable choice for party chairman.

Davey will oppose Governor John W. Bricker in November, the Kent tree surgeon defeating several opponents last week for the Democratic nomination.

In the meantime, Republicans of the state were meeting in Columbus with the new central committee organizing. Tom A. Renick, chairman of the Pickaway County Republican Executive committee, is the new state central committee man from the 11th Ohio district, which includes Pickaway, Ross, Fairfield, Perry and Hocking Counties. He was attending the session which was expected to result in re-election of Ed D. Schorr of Cincinnati as party chairman despite rumors to the contrary that his opposition to Harold Burton, Cleveland mayor, who defeated Dudley White, Schorr's choice for the U. S. Senate nomination, would result in his being unseated.

Enmity Revealed

There has been open enmity between the followers of Mayor Burton ever since Schorr personally opposed Burton's candidacy before the May 14 primary. At that time Schorr endorsed White, of Norwalk.

Burton announced he would not be in Columbus while the committee was in session, but would be represented at the meeting by Cleveland Service Director Miles E. Evans, who is a member. The mayor intimated that Evans would "make any statement I have to make in regard to the chairman at the committee meeting."

However, Burton followers indicated he would not press for the ouster of Schorr because he was interested mainly in a complete victory for the Republican ticket in November.

There was little possibility that Governor Bricker would ask that Schorr be replaced, despite the fact that the chief executive and the party chairman have not been thoroughly in accord on party matters since last year. Bricker reiterated several times that he would not interfere with the work of the committee in naming a chairman.

16 Members New

At least 16 of the 44 G. O. P. committee members are new this year and they may play a vital part in drafting the policies of the Republican party in the state.

Walter Hoving, author of the popular book, "Careers and Business," will be Ika Chase's guest when Luncheon at the Waldorf is broadcast Saturday, May 25, at 12:30 p. m. over the NBC-Blue network. Mrs. Joseph R. Truesdale, social registerite who specializes in planning budget weddings for working girls and who can arrange an entire ceremony, wedding gown, reception and all for as little as a hundred dollars, will be an interviewed guest on the same program.

BEAT THE BAND

Vocalist Perry Como will be featured in a medley of "It's A Wonderful World," "Make Believe Island," and "Angel in Disguise" on the Beat the Band broadcast Sunday, May 26, over the NBC-Red network at 5:30 p. m. BAKER LIVES MODERATELY

Although he is one of the most successful radio performers in every sense of the word, Kenny Baker is not so impressed with his success financially as he is by the mere fact that people like to hear him sing. "While money is a nice thing to have around," says Kenny, "There is nothing of the soul-satisfying pleasure in possessing it that there is in the knowledge that a particular talent that you happen to possess is enjoyed by thousands of people. Therein lies the greatest satisfaction of success." This is not mere chatter with the "Star Theatre" tenor, for he lives moderately, and places himself on a strict monthly budget.

PAT FRIDAY

Even science sometimes errs, often with comical results. Such was the case on the Don Ameche show last week. Ameche had just announced co-ed warbler Pat Friday's song—"Let There Be Love"—and per Patricia was just breaking into the opening chords when a short circuit caused the electrically controlled curtain to come sweeping across the stage. Fortunately Pat saw it coming, and had presence of mind enough to jerk her music stand out of its path. So while the audience sat shut out from the show, Pat went right on singing as if nothing had happened. The mishap was remedied immediately, and the show went on as usual.

Immediately following his June 5 broadcast, Fred Allen goes to the coast to begin his motion picture assignment.

Ona Munson picked up such a sunburn as a result of her first trip to the beach this year that she had to stand all during the rehearsal for her role of "Lorelei" on Tuesday's "Big Town" broadcast.

SPECIAL COAT OF ARMS

TONBRIDGE, England — Air Raid wardens in this town have designed their own coat of arms. It consists of a shield surmounted by a gas mask and surrounded by hops and apples. The quarterings have a steel helmet, gum boot, rattle and hand torch respectively while the shield is colored with the shade of green used on gas detection boards. The inscription reads: "Nobody gasses me with impunity."

At The Cliftona

Grim, ancient and foreboding, the vast outlines of Manderley, haunted Tudor castle of the de Winter in "Rebecca," which will start a run at the Cliftona Theatre on Sunday was built from the description of Manderley in Daphne du Maurier's best selling mystery novel.

This is the castle, where Laurence Olivier and Joan Fontaine, leading players in the film which David O. Selznick produced, lived their dark and somber married life. For the background in which Olivier and Miss Fontaine move with such featured players as George Sanders, Judith Anderson, Nigel Bruce, C. Aubrey Smith, Reginald Denny and Florence Bates, some 40 sets were required.

Alfred Hitchcock, the director, collaborated with Selznick and his aides. Hitchcock was the guest of Miss du Maurier before he left England to direct "Rebecca." She personally took him through an old estate which served as the pattern of her physical description of Manderley.

MAN WHO TOSSED WOMAN AND INFANT FROM AUTO FOUND DEAD, A SUICIDE

XENIA, May 22.—The search for the man who seriously wounded a Xenia woman and then threw her and her baby from his automobile ended today with the discovery of his body near Middletown. Apparently a victim of suicide, the body was identified as that of O. A. Bingham, 56, a Xenia feed store owner. He had been identified by Mrs. Hazel Vance, 22, as the man who had wounded her on the outskirts of Xenia. The baby, Beverly Ann, aged 2, escaped with minor bruises.

A note found in Bingham's car shed no light on the shooting. Green County officials said Bingham had been "keeping company" with Mrs. Vance.

TWO NORWEGIAN OFFICIALS BACK IN HOME LAND

STOCKHOLM, May 22 — With fighting continuing in northern Norway, two members of the refugee Norwegian government returned to their country today in a British warship, according to reports reaching Stockholm.

Although their point of arrival was not disclosed, dispatches said Foreign Minister Halvdan Koht and Defense Minister Ljungberg set foot on Norwegian soil again accompanied by British vessels carrying reinforcements and munitions.

At the same time Allied and Norwegian troops were said to have inflicted heavy losses on German units attempting to reach Narvik from the South.

Norwegian high command statements asserted Allied troops have taken up new positions in the Rana district, 180 miles south of Narvik, as a result of the German defeat.

Although he is one of the most successful radio performers in every sense of the word, Kenny Baker is not so impressed with his success financially as he is by the mere fact that people like to hear him sing. "While money is a nice thing to have around," says Kenny, "There is nothing of the soul-satisfying pleasure in possessing it that there is in the knowledge that a particular talent that you happen to possess is enjoyed by thousands of people. Therein lies the greatest satisfaction of success." This is not mere chatter with the "Star Theatre" tenor, for he lives moderately, and places himself on a strict monthly budget.

PAT FRIDAY

Even science sometimes errs, often with comical results. Such was the case on the Don Ameche show last week. Ameche had just announced coed warbler Pat Friday's song—"Let There Be Love"—and pert Patricia was just breaking into the opening chords when a short circuit caused the electrically controlled curtain to come sweeping across the stage. Fortunately Pat saw it coming, and had presence of mind enough to jerk her music stand out of its path. So while the audience sat shut out from the show, Pat went right on singing as if nothing had happened. The mishap was remedied immediately, and the show went on as usual.

SPECIAL COAT OF ARMS

TONBRIDGE, England — Air Raid wardens in this town have designed their own coat of arms. It consists of a shield surmounted by a gas mask and surrounded by hops and apples. The quarterings have a steel helmet, gum boot, rattle and hand torch respectively while the shield is colored with the shade of green used on gas detection boards. The inscription reads: "Nobody gasses me with impunity."

At The Cliftona

Grim, ancient and foreboding, the vast outlines of Manderley, haunted Tudor castle of the de Winters in "Rebecca," which will start a run at the Cliftona Theatre on Sunday was built from the description of Manderley in Daphne du Maurier's best selling mystery novel.

This is the castle, where Laurence Olivier and Joan Fontaine, leading players in the film which David O. Selznick produced, lived their dark and somber married life. For the background in which Olivier and Miss Fontaine move with such featured players as George Sanders, Judith Anderson, Nigel Bruce, C. Aubrey Smith, Reginald Denny and Florence Bates, some 40 sets were required.

Alfred Hitchcock, the director, collaborated with Selznick and his aides. Hitchcock was the guest of Miss du Maurier before he left England to direct "Rebecca." She personally took him through an old estate which served as the pattern of her physical description of Manderley.

MAN WHO TOSSED WOMAN AND INFANT FROM AUTO FOUND DEAD, A SUICIDE

XENIA, May 22—The search for the man who seriously wounded a Xenia woman and then threw her and her baby from his automobile ended today with the discovery of his body near Middletown.

Apparently a victim of suicide, the body was identified as that of O. A. Bingham, 56, a Xenia feed store owner. He had been identified by Mrs. Hazel Vance, 22, as the man who had wounded her on the outskirts of Xenia. The baby, Beverly Ann, aged 2, escaped with minor bruises.

A note found in Bingham's car shed no light on the shooting. Green County officials said Bingham had been "keeping company" with Mrs. Vance.

TWO NORWEGIAN OFFICIALS BACK IN HOME LAND

STOCKHOLM, May 22 — With fighting continuing in northern Norway, two members of the refugee Norwegian government returned to their country today in a British warship, according to reports reaching Stockholm.

Although their point of arrival was not disclosed, dispatches said Foreign Minister Halvdan Koft and Defense Minister Ljungberg set foot on Norwegian soil again accompanied by British vessels carrying reinforcements and munitions.

At the same time Allied and Norwegian troops were said to have inflicted heavy losses on German units attempting to reach Narvik from the South.

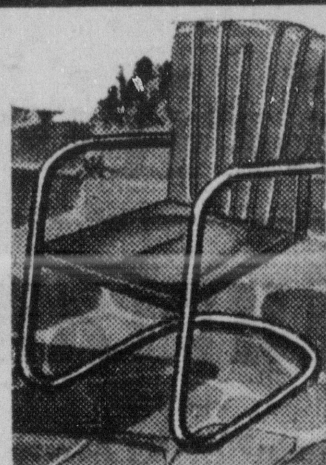

Norwegian high command statements asserted Allied troops have taken up new positions in the Rana district, 180 miles south of Narvik, as a result of the German defeat.

Conscription Of Man-Power, Materials Required For Job Attlee Declares

"Our ruthless enemy is throwing everything into the scale to force a victory. But we are resolved that they shall not succeed."

"The government is convinced that now is the time when it must mobilize the whole resources of the country. We must throw all our weight into the struggle."

"Every private interest must give way to the urgent needs of the community."

"We cannot know what the next few weeks or even days will bring, but whatever comes we shall meet it as the British people in the past have met dangers and overcome them."

"But it is necessary the government should be given complete control over persons and property, not just some persons or some particular class or community, but all persons—rich and poor, employer and worker, man and woman, and all property."

"The government is not asking these powers in the spirit of panic."

"There is no need for panic. But the government must ask this unusual procedure in view of the grave peril in which the nation stands today."

Laborite and Liberal spokesmen concurred in Attlee's demand.

"Enemy losses yesterday totaled 120 airplanes, of which 35 were downed in air battles, 14 by anti-aircraft fire and the remainder destroyed on the ground. Ten German planes are missing."

"Fighting between our Narvik group against numerically far superior enemy forces is continuing. Our mountain chassateurs, advancing from Trondheim northward, occupied Mo and Storforshell, 400 kilometres to the North, taking prisoner numerous Norwegian and British troops."

A German ring of death-dealing steel tightened today on more than 1,000,000 Allied troops trapped in a corner in northern France and Belgium while the Nazi air force rained bombs on retreating British forces reportedly seeking passage back to England."

Wave after wave of German planes criss-crossed the battlefields to attack moving columns of Belgians, French and British from the shattered Belgian city of Ghent to the Somme River, in France.

Striving to transform the Allied disaster into a final, break-breaking blow from which Britain will find it difficult to recover, Nazi quarters said "heavy casualties" were inflicted by mass bombings on an estimated 300,000 British troops allegedly "attempting to embark and return to England."

FRENCH FORCE GERMAN FROM CITY OF ARRAS

me: 'I am full of confidence, if everyone does his duty with fierce energy.'

The civilian population must not let itself be terrified by raids by German motorized troops, which are like the cavalry raids of other days and whose boldness will cost them dearly.

"The population must stay at home and work."

Guarded optimism was the keynote in military circles this afternoon as swift reorganization of the French army and its position went forward swiftly.

Beyond news of the recapture of Arras, there was little outwardly evident to cause the sudden lifting of spirits, and correspondents would not be allowed to tell just what is happening even if they knew.

New Moves Formed

But it seems a safe assumption to say that sweeping new French moves will be seen before long.

Although the fighting goes forward endlessly along the entire front, there is a lull in the cataclysmic violence at present as the Germans catch their breath and rush up thousands of tons of supplies over harrassed communication lines and endeavor to consolidate their positions.

The Nazi offensive may be resumed before the end of the day.

There is still no official confirmation or denial of German claims that General Henri Giraud, commander of the French Ninth Army, has been captured.

Giraud has been careening about the front in a tank, witnessing with his own eyes in conditions of greatest danger his army's progress and activities.

Giraud's escape when captured in the last war is one of the deathless legends of the army. He travelled 400 miles through Germany after his escape from a prison camp, posing as a bus conductor and disguising his identity in many other ways to reach Belgium and finally France.

LONDON, May 22—Tremendous aerial activity raged over the English Channel all night and during the early hours today as Royal Air Force patrols maintained a ceaseless watch for a possible mass German sky assault on Great Britain.

At dawn the activity increased and at times the sky was reported full of planes.

In addition, there was intense aerial activity over France and Belgium and explosions of aerial bombs in England itself as the Allied forces battle to stem the Nazi drive toward channel ports.

In a dispatch datelined "With the Royal Air Force in France," Reuters news agency reported that British bombers this morning raided German supply lines for nearly four hours.

The attacks were directed at objectives along the Franco-Belgian border, the rear of the German mechanized drive to the channel.

According to the dispatch German movements of supporting columns along the Meuse River from Dinant to Montherme also were bombed and machine-gunned. Many tons of bombs were dropped and several large fires were started, Reuters said.

Earlier it was announced officially that a German plane flung two bombs on two districts in southeast England. No casualties or damage were reported.

Some of the bombs fell on land and others into the sea off the coast.

Raider Flees to Sea

Brief but intensive anti-aircraft fire was heard at 3 a. m. along the southeast coast, after which a raiding plane turned and flew out to sea. No air raid alarm was sounded.

But east coast, residents were awakened shortly after midnight and again at 3.10 a. m. by the noise of planes and intense gun fire. British pursuit planes ascended.

Anti-aircraft batteries around the Thames Estuary also went into action. The drone of airplane motors was heard there followed by a sharp explosion and a glare which lighted up the sky. There were two more explosions resembling gun fire.

Late last night another German plane dropped bombs in the sea a short distance from shore off the southeast coast. It was stated this raid was endeavoring to bomb shipping, but missed its target. It dropped its bombs in a cluster of about half a dozen.

G. O. P. REVEALS GAIN IN STATE BALLOT COUNT

COLUMBUS, May 22—Ohio Republicans made substantial gains in total votes in the primary this year as compared with 1938 while the Democrats lost ground, a survey of the complete unofficial tabulation in the Secretary of State's office disclosed today.

The G. O. P. gain totaled 132,498 votes, while the Democrats dropped 213,295 ballots this year over the 1938 primary.

Popularity of Governor Bricker with voters also increased, according to tabulations. He headed the ticket this year with 608,160 votes as compared to 581,320 in 1938, a gain of 26,840.

U. S. Sen. Robert A. Taft also increased his vote following this year in the presidential preference primary as compared to the number of ballots he received in 1938 when he ran for the senate. This year he was given 509,976 for president; for senator two years ago he polled 322,270, a gain of 187,706.

Secretary of State George Neffner disclosed that 794,307 Republicans voted to the polls this year and 661,809 in 1938. The Democratic total was: 901,125 in 1938 and 687,295 in 1940.

Despite the fact that Davey won the nomination this year, he received less votes than he did in 1938 when he was defeated for the nomination by Charles Sawyer. The Davey vote was: 419,942 in 1938, and 303,839 in 1940, a loss of 116,103.

THE GARDEN CLINIC

By VICTOR H. RIES,
O. S. U. floriculturist

QUESTION: What comprehensive books on gardening and landscape gardening do you suggest for a beginner?

ANSWER: On general gardening I would suggest America's Garden Book by Bush-Brown; Gardening by Montague Free; and the Complete Book of Gardening by Leonard Barron. On landscape gardening, I recommend the Art of Home Landscaping by Prof. M. E. Bottomley, University of Cincinnati; also Planning and Planting the Home Garden by Pauline Murray; and the new Garden Guide now available on news stands put out by Better Homes and Gardens.

We have a complete classified list of garden books which we will send to anyone upon request.

QUESTION: We have built a new home and have a real problem in grading and landscaping. One of our Farmers' Institute speakers thought I could get help from Ohio State University. We have to consider the cost so we need real help. Is there any department at the University that could be of assistance to us?

ANSWER: It is impossible for Ohio State University to furnish individual landscape help. For farm folks, farm home landscape schools are being scheduled in a number of the counties in the state. You can get information in regard to these from your county agricultural agent. Otherwise, I would suggest that you consult a local landscape architect, landscape gardener, or a nursery which furnishes landscape service.

QUESTION: As a member of a garden club I have been asked to prepare a paper on some famous gardens. Could you advise me where I could secure information on this subject?

ANSWER: You will find considerable material on this in the book Gardens in America by Cran. Although there will not be descriptions, references to many of the gardens will be found in the Gardens' Travel Book by E. I. Farrington. There will be some material in Old Time Gardens by Earle.

QUESTION: Can you give me some information about a night blooming cereus plant I own? It is 10 years old, five feet high and has bloomed three years. Only 19 of the 36 buds bloomed last year. Should I put it out of doors during the summer? I did last year but the leaves got scorched.

ANSWER: I always have felt that the average gardener waters his plants too little, especially when they are of the nature of the cereus. I would water it more or less regularly, not keeping it too wet of course, fertilize it regularly and during the summer would put it out of doors in partial shade to protect it from scald. You will find complete instructions on the care of house plants in our bulletin, House Plants, which you may secure from your county agricultural agent.

QUESTION: Can you give me some information on the care and habits of the Crimson Lake bougainvillea? Is it a hardy plant and does it need full sun? Is it a vine or bush?

ANSWER: Those who have traveled in the South, particularly in the southern half of Florida, have enjoyed the various forms of bougainvillea. As you come north you see that it does not grow and from this realize that it is not hardy. Although very satisfactory as a greenhouse plant where it may be kept pinched back to form a bush in a pot, I doubt if it would be particularly satisfactory from the standpoint of bloom when grown in the house.

QUESTION: Please advise treatment for jonquils which send forth lovely foliage and no bloom. All have been planted the past

LANDON ARRIVES FOR F. D. PARLEY

cuss anything until I get down to the White House."

Wearing his familiar, battered campaign hat, Landon went from the train to the senate restaurant, where he held a breakfast conference with the Kansas congressional delegation, headed by Sen. Capper.

Other influential Republicans, meanwhile, issued urgent warnings to fellow party members against falling in line with any suggestion of that nature from Mr. Roosevelt. They contended that it would hurt G.O.P. chances in the forthcoming presidential elections.

Said House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Mass., permanent chairman-designate of the Republican national convention in Philadelphia next month: "Putting Republicans in the cabinet now is like increasing WPA rolls just before an election. If precedent is followed they will be out after election."

Well-founded reports that the President had offered the secretaryship of navy to Col. Frank Knox, Landon's 1936 running mate, inspired the alarm within the Republican party.

Further, it was rumored that Rep. James W. Wadsworth (R) N. Y., was to be asked to serve as secretary of war.

PICKAWAY CLUB OPENS ACTIVITIES THIS EVENING

Everything is in readiness for the formal social opening of the Pickaway Country Club which will get underway tonight at 8:30. A buffet supper for club members and their friends will be served in the dining room during the first hour.

Contract and auction bridge will be played in addition to Chinese Checkers, bingo and many other games to suit the pleasure of the guests.

A choice door prize will be presented during the evening with loads of prizes available in the various forms of entertainment.

Joe Staley and his orchestra will provide music for dancing in the Old Barn, where the younger set will find delightful entertainment for the evening.

Carefully planned in all details by Mrs. Charles G. Shulze and her committee, the open house promises to be the outstanding social function of the club for the summer season.

QUESTION: Can you give me some information on the care and habits of the Crimson Lake bougainvillea? Is it a hardy plant and does it need full sun? Is it a vine or bush?

ANSWER: Those who have traveled in the South, particularly in the southern half of Florida, have enjoyed the various forms of bougainvillea. As you come north you see that it does not grow and from this realize that it is not hardy. Although very satisfactory as a greenhouse plant where it may be kept pinched back to form a bush in a pot, I doubt if it would be particularly satisfactory from the standpoint of bloom when grown in the house.

QUESTION: Please advise treatment for jonquils which send forth lovely foliage and no bloom. All have been planted the past

"Our ruthless enemy is throwing everything into the scale to force a victory. But we are resolved that they shall not succeed."

"The government is convinced that now is the time when it must mobilize the whole resources of the country. We must throw all our weight into the struggle."

"Every private interest must give way to the urgent needs of the community."

"We cannot know what the next few weeks or even days will bring, but whatever comes we shall meet it as the British people in the past have met dangers and overcome them."

"But it is necessary the government should be given complete control over persons and property, not just some persons or some particular class or community, but all persons—rich and poor, employer and worker, man and woman, and all property."

"The government is not asking these powers in the spirit of panic."

"There is no need for panic. But the government must ask this unusual procedure in view of the grave peril in which the nation stands today."

Laborite and Liberal spokesmen concurred in Attlee's demand.

19, our numerically inferior troops took prisoner 1,600 French and 13,000 Dutch.

"The strong modern Neufchateau group of the Liege fortresses now has fallen, with 12 officers and 500 men taken prisoner."

"On May 21, the German air force successfully engaged in harassing the enemy retreat and also bombed several airdromes, destroying many planes on the ground."

"The railway stations at Compiègne and Creil are afire."

"In and off Belgian and French ports, one cruiser and 11 merchantmen and transports were sunk and several other ships damaged."

"German speedboats sank an auxiliary cruiser during an attack against French channel ports."

"Enemy losses yesterday totaled 120 airplanes, of which 35 were downed in air battles, 14 by anti-aircraft fire and the remainder destroyed on the ground. Ten German planes are missing."

"Fighting between our Narvik group against numerically far superior enemy forces is continuing. Our mountain chassours, advancing from Trondheim northward, occupied Mo and Storforshell, 400 kilometers to the North, taking prisoner numerous Norwegian and British troops."

A German ring of death-dealing steel tightened today on more than 1,000,000 Allied troops trapped in a corner in northern France and Belgium while the Nazi air force rained bombs on retreating British forces reportedly seeking passage back to England."

Wave after wave of German planes criss-crossed the battlefields to attack moving columns of Belgians, French and British from the shattered Belgian city of Ghent to the Somme River, in France."

Striving to transform the Allied disaster into a final, back-breaking blow from which Britain will find it difficult to recover, Nazi quarters said "heavy casualties" were inflicted by mass bombings on an estimated 300,000 British troops allegedly "attempting to embark and return to England."

FRENCH FORCE GERMAN FROM CITY OF ARRAS

me: 'I am full of confidence, if everyone does his duty with fierce energy.'

The civilian population must not let itself be terrified by raids by German motorized troops, which are like the cavalry raids of other days and whose boldness will cost them dearly."

"The population must stay at home and work."

Guarded optimism was the keynote in military circles this afternoon as swift reorganization of the French army and its position went forward swiftly."

Beyond news of the recapture of Arras, there was little outwardly evident to cause the sudden lifting of spirits, and correspondents would not be allowed to tell just what is happening even if they knew."

New Moves Formed

But it seems a safe assumption to say that sweeping new French moves will be seen before long. Although the fighting goes forward endlessly along the entire front, there is a lull in the cataclysmic violence at present as the Germans catch their breath and rush up thousands of tons of supplies over harassed communication lines and endeavor to consolidate their positions."

The Nazi offensive may be resumed before the end of the day. There is still no official confirmation or denial of German claims that General Henri Giraud, commander of the French Ninth Army, has been captured."

Giraud has been careening about the front in a tank, witnessing with his own eyes in conditions of greatest danger his army's progress and activities."

Giraud's escape when captured in the last war is one of the deathless legends of the army. He traveled 400 miles through Germany after his escape from a prison camp, posing as a bus conductor and disguising his identity in many other ways to reach Belgium and finally France."

LONDON, May 22—Tremendous aerial activity raged over the English Channel all night and during the early hours today as Royal Air Force patrols maintained a ceaseless watch for a possible mass German sky assault on Great Britain."

At dawn the activity increased and at times the sky was reported full of planes."

In addition, there was intense aerial activity over France and Belgium and explosions of aerial bombs in England itself as the Allied forces battle to stem the Nazi drive toward channel ports."

In a dispatch datelined "With the Royal Air Force in France," Reuters news agency reported that British bombers this morning raided German supply lines for nearly four hours."

The attacks were directed at objectives along the Franco-Belgian border, the rear of the German mechanized drive to the channel."

According to the dispatch German movements of supporting columns along the Meuse River from Dinant to Montherme also were bombed and machine-gunned. Many tons of bombs were dropped and several large fires were started, Reuters said."

Earlier it was announced officially that a German plane jetted bombs on two districts in southeast England. No casualties or damage were reported."

Some of the bombs fell on land and others into the sea off the coast."

Raiders Flees to Sea

Brief but intensive anti-aircraft fire was heard at 3 a. m. along the southeast coast, after which a raiding plane turned and flew out to sea. No air raid alarm was sounded."

But east coast residents were awakened shortly after midnight and again at 3.10 a. m. by the noise of planes and intense gun fire. British pursuit planes ascended."

Anti-aircraft batteries around the Thames Estuary also went into action. The drone of airplane motors was heard there followed by a sharp explosion and a glare which lighted up the sky. There were two more explosions resembling gun fire."

Late last night another German plane dropped bombs in the sea a short distance from shore off the southeast coast. It was stated this raid was endeavoring to bomb shipping, but missed its target. It dropped its bombs in a cluster of about half a dozen."

As the boy was about to enter the room, an automobile crashed through the wall of the house and landed on the youngster's bed."

THE GARDEN CLINIC

By VICTOR H. RIES,
O. S. U. floriculturist

QUESTION: What comprehensive books on gardening and landscape gardening do you suggest for a beginner?

ANSWER: On general gardening I would suggest America's Garden Book by Bush-Brown; Gardening by Montague Free; and the Complete Book of Gardening by Leonard Barron. On landscape gardening, I recommend the Art of Home Landscaping by Prof. M. E. Bottomley, University of Cincinnati;

also Planning and Planting the Home Garden by Pauline Murray; and the new Garden Guide now available on news stands put out by Better Homes and Gardens.

We have a complete classified list of garden books which we will send to anyone upon request.

QUESTION: We have built a new home and have a real problem in grading and landscaping. One of our Farmers' Institute speakers thought I could get help from Ohio State University. We have to consider the cost so we need real help. Is there any department at the University that could be of assistance to us?

ANSWER: It is impossible for Ohio State University to furnish individual landscape help. For farm folks, farm home landscape schools are being scheduled in a number of the counties in the state. You can get information in regard to these from your county agricultural agent. Otherwise, I would suggest that you consult a local landscape architect, landscape gardener, or a nursery which furnishes landscape service.

QUESTION: As a member of a garden club I have been asked to prepare a paper on some famous gardens. Could you advise me where I could secure information on this subject.

ANSWER: You will find considerable material on this in the book Gardens in America by Cran. Although there will not be descriptions, references to many of the gardens will be found in the Gardens' Travel Book by E. I. Farrington. There will be some material in Old Time Gardens by Earle.

QUESTION: Can you give me some information about a night blooming cereus plant I own? It is 10 years old, five feet high and has bloomed three years. Only 19 of the 36 buds bloomed last year. Should I put it out of doors during the summer? I did last year but the leaves got scorched.

ANSWER: I always have felt that the average gardener waters his plants too little, especially when they are of the nature of the cereus. I would water it more or less regularly, not keeping it too wet of course, fertilize it regularly and during the summer would put it out of doors in partial shade to protect it from sun-scald. You will find complete instructions on the care of house plants in our bulletin, House Plants, which you may secure from your county agricultural agent.

QUESTION: Can you give me some information on the care and habits of the Crimson Lake bougainvillea? Is it a hardy plant and does it need full sun? Is it a vine or bush?

ANSWER: Those who have traveled in the South, particularly in the southern half of Florida, have enjoyed the various forms of bougainvillea. As you come north you see that it does not grow and from this realize that it is not hardy. Although very satisfactory as a greenhouse plant where it may be kept pinched back to form a bush in a pot, I doubt if it would be particularly satisfactory from the standpoint of bloom when grown in the house.

cuss anything until I get down to the White House."

Wearing his familiar, battered campaign hat, Landon went from the train to the senate restaurant, where he held a breakfast conference with the Kansas congressional delegation, headed by Sen. Capper.

Other influential Republicans, meanwhile, issued urgent warnings to fellow party members against falling in line with any suggestion of that nature from Mr. Roosevelt. They contended that it would hurt G.O.P. chances in the forthcoming presidential elections.

Said House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Mass., permanent chairman-designate of the Republican national convention in Philadelphia next month:

"Putting Republicans in the cabinet now is like increasing WPA rolls just before an election. If precedent is followed they will be out after election."

Well-founded reports that the President had offered the secretaryship of navy to Col. Frank Knox, Landon's 1936 running mate, inspired the alarm within the Republican party.

Further, it was rumored that Rep. James W. Wadsworth (R) N. Y., was to be asked to serve as secretary of war.

Everything is in readiness for the formal social opening of the Pickaway Country Club which will get underway tonight at 8:30. A buffet supper for club members and their friends will be served in the dining room during the first hour.

Contract and auction bridge will be played in addition to Chinese Checkers, bingo and many other games to suit the pleasure of the guests.

A choice door prize will be presented during the evening with loads of prizes available in the various forms of entertainment.

Joe Staley and his orchestra will provide music for dancing in the Old Barn, where the younger set will find delightful entertainment for the evening.

Carefully planned in all details by Mrs. Charles G. Schulze and her committee, the open house promises to be the outstanding social function of the club for the summer season.

Jimmy Fox Has Chance To Set Many Records

Boston Star Hits Home Runs With Sacks Full Second Consecutive Day; Russo Halts Indians; Mungo, Camilli Star

By Pat Robinson

NEW YORK, May 22—If Jimmy Fox can continue to keep a misbehaving pair of sinuses under control this year, he may win the American League's most valuable player award as he did once before; may shatter Babe Ruth's home run record, and may even surpass Hack Wilson's mark for runs batted in during a season.

The Red Sox slugger again earned a line in the record books alongside of Ruth and Bill Dickey by hitting a homer with the bases loaded for the second day in succession.

This smash was the major factor in the Red Sox 11-8 victory over the Tigers and boosted Jimmy's total of runs batted in to 38 for 26 games. At this rate, he would have about 225 for the year or 35 more than Wilson's 190.

That home was No. 11 for Jim, which is about the pace Ruth set in 1927 when the Bambino rang the bell 60 times. Doerr, Cramer and Williams also hit for the circuit for the Red Sox yesterday and Greenberg and York contributed similar wallops for the Tigers.

Yanks Beat Indians
The victory increased the Red Sox lead over the Indians who dropped a 10-2 decision to the aroused Yankees. Young Russo held the Indians to three hits while his mates were handling Milnar his first defeat.

The White Sox put over two markers in the ninth to beat the Senators, 9-8; and the unfortunate Athletic were stopped by rain while leading the Browns 6-0 in the first half of the fifth.

There was only one game in the National and in that one some nifty relief pitching by Van Mungo and Doph Camilli's single with three aboard in the ninth gave the Dodgers two runs and a 4-3 verdict over the Cubs.

MIDDLEWEIGHT CONTENDER - By Jack Sords

Many Putting Their Cash On Overlin Over Garcia

By Lawton Carver

NEW YORK, May 22—In this era of upsets, stunning form reversals are commonplace, and in boxing circles around here today a change in ownership of that part of the middleweight title held by Ceferino Garcia, a Los Angeles Filipino, was foreseen. The wagering is running for the champion at odds of 9 to 5, but a considerable number of the habitués of cauliflower alley are stringing along with Ken Overlin to jab, cuff and dance lightly, but definitely, to a 15-round decision in tomorrow night's tussle at Madison Square Garden.

Because Garcia slices easily around the eyes, some even suggest the possibility of a technical knock-out victory for the challenger.

A former sailor who saw only two ports while he was aboard the U.S.S. Idaho and U.S.S. Tennessee, Overlin since then has boxed on three continents, taking in virtually every city of any consequence in this country, running up a grand total of 173 starts, of which he has lost only seven. He has blown only one decision in a score of fights in the last two years and seemingly has an excellent chance to take the crown which Garcia won by knocking out Fred Apostoli last October.

The best Garcia has been able to do with the championship is to defend it against Glen Lee with a knockout and against little Henry Armstrong in a draw. The latter rates Overlin as a good bet because of his extremely good left hand, and believes that he himself would have beaten, instead of drawing Garcia, if he had any kind of a jab.

More than usual importance is attached to the bout now by virtue of the fact that negotiations were opened yesterday for a match between the winner and Al Hostak, who also claims the title with some backing. Hence, the

NEW YORK, May 22—Whitey Moore today was to have another chance to hurl for the National League leaders, the Cincinnati Reds.

Reds To Engage Cards Saturday And Sunday

CINCINNATI, May 22—The Reds will take a furlough from the road wars over the week end and return to their home field for three contests in two days against the St. Louis Cardinals. Two of the games will be played in a single afternoon, Saturday, then on Sunday the same two bitter rivals will hook up in a single game on what has been designated as pennant raising day.

It is very fitting, and it wasn't an accident, that the 1939 pennant should be raised on the first Sunday the Cardinals play in Cincinnati this year. The Cards have every right to see what that pennant looks like, for they came the closest to winning it themselves. Fans of this vicinity well remember that gruelling struggle down the stretch, and the spectacular series late in September in which the Reds clinched Cincinnati's first pennant in 20 years.

Ceremony surrounding the flag raising will include the march to the flagpole in which all members of the Cincinnati team who were with the club in 1939 will aid in carrying of the flag. Smittie's Military Band will provide the music. The doubleheader to be played Saturday was necessitated by the postponement because of flood of the game scheduled April 24.

Following the flag raising contest Sunday, the Reds will take to the road again for a short trip to Pittsburgh and Chicago. They will meet the Pirates in a double-header Monday and single games Tuesday and Wednesday, then head for Chicago, where they are to meet the rampaging Cubs in a twin bill memorial Day afternoon.

Return to Cincinnati is scheduled for Saturday, June 1, with the Boston Bees opposing. A double-header will be played Sunday, June 2. This will be the first home Sunday twin bill of the season. A ladies' day game also is scheduled against the Bees Monday, June 3, whereupon the Giants will enter Crosley Field for two games, including the season's first night game on Wednesday, June 5.

Jimmy Fox Has Chance To Set Many Records

Boston Star Hits Home Runs With Sacks Full Second Consecutive Day; Russo Halts Indians; Mungo, Camilli Star

By Pat Robinson
NEW YORK, May 22—If Jimmy Fox can continue to keep a misbehaving pair of sinuses under control this year, he may win the American League's most valuable player award as he did once before; may shatter Babe Ruth's home run record, and may even surpass Hack Wilson's mark for runs batted in during a season.

The Red Sox slugger again earned a line in the record books alongside of Ruth and Bill Dickey by hitting a homer with the bases loaded for the second day in succession.

This smash was the major factor in the Red Sox 11-8 victory over the Tigers and boosted Jimmy's total of runs zatted in to 38 for 26 games. At this rate, he would have about 225 for the year or 35 more than Wilson's 190.

That home was No. 11 for Jim, which is about the pace Ruth set in 1927 when the Bambino rang the bell 60 times.

Doerr, Cramer and Williams also hit for the circuit for the Red Sox yesterday and Greenberg and York contributed similar wallops for the Tigers.

Yanks Beat Indians

The victory increased the Red Sox lead over the Indians who dropped a 10-2 decision to the championed Yankees. Young Russo held the Indians to three hits while his mates were handling Milnar his first defeat.

The White Sox put over two markers in the ninth to beat the Senators, 9-8; and the unfortunate Athletic were stopped by rain while leading the Browns 6-0 in the first half of the fifth.

There was only one game in the National and in that one some nifty relief pitching by Van Mungo and Dloph Camilli's single with three aboard in the ninth gave the Dodgers two runs and a 4-3 verdict over the Cubs.

MIDDLEWEIGHT CONTENDER - By Jack Sords

Many Putting Their Cash On Overlin Over Garcia

By Lawton Carver
NEW YORK, May 22—In this era of upsets, stunning form reversals are commonplace, and in boxing circles around here today a change in ownership of that part of the middleweight title held by Ceferino Garcia, a Los Angeles Filipino, was foreseen. The wagering is running for the champion at odds of 9 to 5, but a considerable number of the habitués of cauliflower alley are stringing along with Ken Overlin to jab, cuff and dance lightly, but definitely, to a 15-round decision in tomorrow night's tussle at Madison Square Garden.

Because Garcia slices easily around the eyes, some even suggest the possibility of a technical knockout victory for the challenger.

A former sailor who saw only two ports while he was aboard the U.S.S. Idaho and U.S.S. Tennessee, Overlin since then has boxed on three continents, taking in virtually every city of any consequence in this country, running up a grand total of 173 starts, of which he has lost only seven. He has blown only one decision in a score of fights in the last two years and seemingly has an excellent chance to take the crown which Garcia won by knocking out Fred Apostoli last October.

The best Garcia has been able to do with the championship is to defend it against Glen Lee with a knockout and against little Henry Armstrong in a draw. The latter rates Overlin as a good bet because of his extremely good left hand, and believes that he himself would have beaten, instead of drawing Garcia, if he had any kind of a jab.

More than usual importance is attached to the bout now by virtue of the fact that negotiations were opened yesterday for a match between the winner and Al Hostak, who also claims the title with some backing. Hence, the long-muddled middleweight situation may be finally smoothed out, if interests at Seattle, Hostak's headquarters, and Promoter Mike Jacobs can get together.

In any case, there is a conviction among some around here that Garcia will have to knock Overlin out to win. He might do that very thing, for he is a paralyzing clown with his right hand.

Overlin's biggest worry is over the fact that he has been in a training camp for the first time in his life to prepare for this one. A happy-go-lucky gent of the Maxie Rosenbloom school of thought, he hasn't much time for the rustic scene and is a little perturbed to find himself in such good shape. He fears possible toxic effects from the sunshine and fresh air he has been soaking up during the last three weeks around Summit, N. J.

THE HEROES AND THE GOATS

WAR MORALITY

ONE of the puzzling things about the present European war is the apparent belief of so many people, especially young people, that there are no important moral issues involved, that it doesn't involve any basic principles of life.

This attitude seems to assume that one side has no better case to present than the other. Or else that there is some magical justification of war itself, whereby any war becomes all right when a nation has once entered upon it. Such assumptions get us into moral and legal chaos.

There has to be some standard of national morality, some code of law, some test of righteousness and evil. Civilization has been working for many thousand years to establish such standards for individuals and nations, and now to dismiss them with a wave of the hand is to bring anarchy into modern life.

There shouldn't be any question among sane and literate Americans as to who started this war. One nation, armed and prepared as no nation ever was before, marches into neighboring countries that have given no offense, burning, smashing, killing and stealing. By such violence it makes itself possessor of those countries' wealth and master of their people. It does this not merely with old enemies like France and Britain, but with countries unprepared and neutral.

Surely to any normal mind it is a marauding expedition pure and simple. In view of the complexity of modern civilized life, it is a destructive crime of the first magnitude, not only shocking normal consciences but threatening civilization itself.

RESCUING TRAVELERS

AMERICANS notoriously like to hang around in dangerous places, to see what is going on. Thus thousands have been caught in Europe who haven't really any business there. The luckiest of them are the 7,000 estimated by our government to be in England and Ireland.

Obviously the sooner those Americans get back home, the better for everybody concerned. They make trouble for the British government, and also for the American government.

All of our citizens unnecessarily living in the British Isles have been urged to concentrate in Ireland, from where they will be shipped home as opportunity offers. The "danger zone" blankets the British Isles, but our government has authority to get its nationals through when ships are available. Washington may send a vessel to the west coast of Ireland for stranded citizens.

It may soon be "later than they think" for many of them.

WASHINGTON is very well satisfied with evidences of the Pan American determination to remain democratic no matter what happens in Europe. All advice from capitals of the southern republics are to the effect that liberty-loving elements in their part of the new world simply have been strengthened by recent German successes, in their resolve to keep totalitarianism from gaining a foothold in our hemisphere.

If there's any southern country concerning which Washington, most confidentially, has been a trifle uneasy, it's Mexico. Congressman Martin Dies, for instance, has suggested that un-American propaganda is dangerously prevalent just below the Rio Grande.

However, Josephus Daniels, our ambassador in Mexico City, who probably is as good a judge as Congressman Dies, says it isn't. The ambassador, temporarily away from his post on a visit home, reports that, while there's a Mexican Communist party, it isn't strong, and that Nazi-ism is unpopular in the republic. Furthermore, he mentions that, if the Dies committee knows anything more of totalitarian plotting on Mexico's side of the border than the Mexican government knows, the latter government will be glad to be enlightened. This doesn't sound particularly undemocratic so far as Mexico is concerned.

Of course, Yankee-Mexican relations have been somewhat strained by the oil controversy, but that doesn't in the least imply that Mexico is totalitarian.

Argentina, Uruguay and Panama have been quicker than Uncle Sam has been to resent overseas disregard of American neutrality. They were prompt to take offense at the landing of British and French marines in the Dutch West Indies. We were disposed to wink at it. They are almost more neutral than we are. They're so neutral that they verge on being willing to fight for neutrality.

They're for Pan-American solidarity, anyhow. If it does have to be fought for, Uncle Sam will have to do the fighting—not the Pan Americas in their entirety. Still, they're in favor of it.

Germany's quite strong on the South American east coast. A couple of Brazil's southern states are nearly wholly German. They'd like to Nazify the entire country. But the very fact that they're so Nazi-ficated makes the rest of Brazil hate them. And the anti-Nazi

HITLER SACRIFICES THOUSANDS

WASHINGTON — To understand the present tactics of Germany you have to go back to a remark attributed to Hitler before the war really got serious:

"If the war lasts four years I would lose 4,000,000 men. It is better to lose 3,000,000 men in three months."

In other words, the present German casualties have been terrific, considerably worse than the French. But Hitler has been willing to lose men. He is determined to push the war to a quick finish this summer, no matter how long and tragic may be the stream of coffins going back from the front.

Hitler has ample supplies to last through the summer, but not beyond. So if the war drags past the autumn, Germany is lost.

Another thing you have to remember about the Germans, is that although they have been building up their war machine for seven years, they have been working on war strategy even longer—for twenty years. Ever since the end of the last war they have been brooding on their mistakes of 1914-1917 and figuring on how to avoid them this time.

The big mistake made in the battle of the Marne, in 1914, was that General von Kluck waited for his artillery to catch up with his infantry. The artillery was horse drawn. This gave General Joffre time to rush his taxicab army from Paris. Now, however, the German artillery is mechanized, most of it in tanks and abreast or in advance of the infantry.

ASTOUNDING NAZI MECHANIZATION

Compared man for man, the French troops are better soldiers than the Germans, superbly trained, have excellent morale. But they have not the same material as the Germans, particularly tanks, airplanes, mechanization.

In tanks the French appeared to be superior to Germany when the war began last September. They brought into play a new super-tank, as big as a locomotive, which could come up alongside German pillboxes without being bothered by machine-gun fire.

But the Germans have now gone much further. They have heavier tanks than the French and many more of them. Apparently, they learned a lesson from the French tank in September, and started the German industrial machine turning out hundreds of them all last winter.

As a result, the Germans have been advancing with batteries of tanks so thickly armored that it takes heavy artillery to stop them.

Preceding the tanks, Nazi airplanes rout French reinforcements and bomb truck trains off the highways.

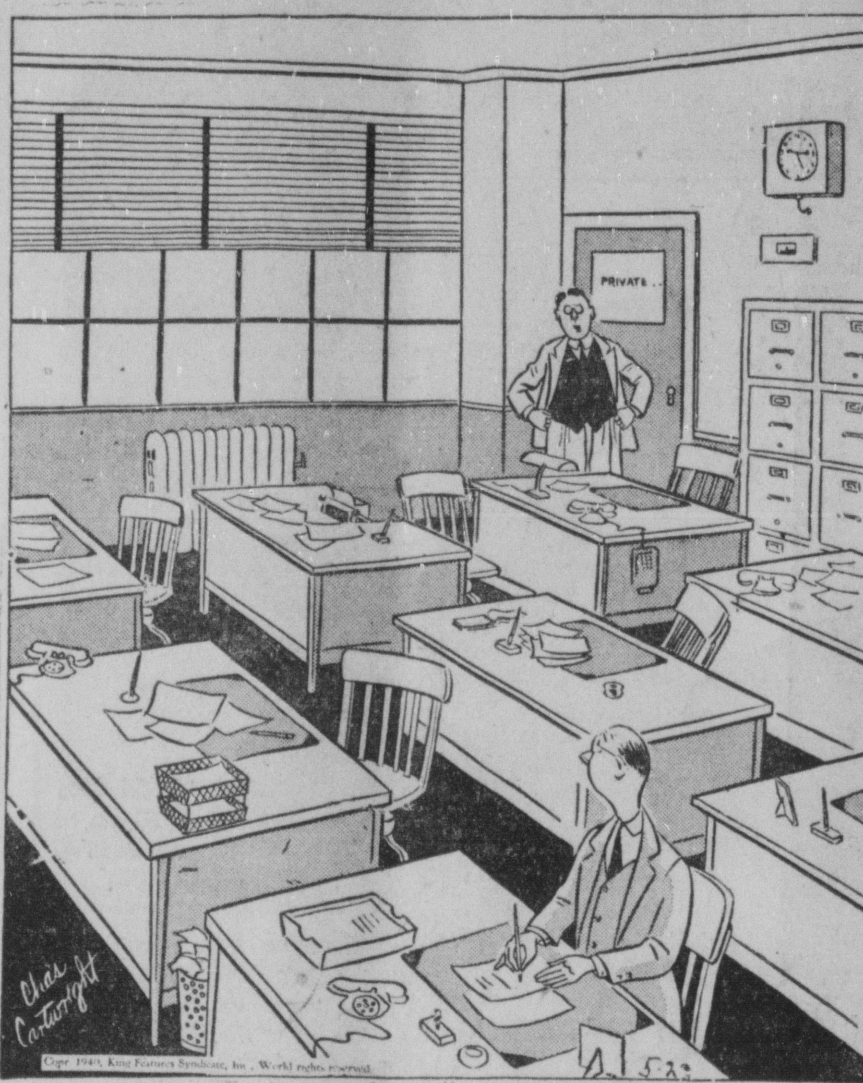

Never before has the world seen such modern mechanization. It has completely upset the strategy of warfare. In the old days, a valley was an excellent channel through which troops could advance. But today, an airplane sweeps up a valley, catching the enemy in a pocket, and bombs or machine guns them in every direction.

DIET AND HEALTH

Training Posture—Begin With Infancy
By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WHAT CAN be done to train posture during infancy?

THE beginnings of bad posture are laid during very early life. Always hold a baby so that its back is supported. A cramped position may start to make the back crooked. Round shoulders may begin by clothes that pull on the neck and shoulders.

Example is the best teacher. Babies are great imitators. When they begin to walk, if the mother or father is stooped or round-shouldered, they will tend to do the same. Once or twice a day, in the formative period when the baby is from eighteen months to two years old, stand him up against the wall, the mother on the wall around the corner where she can be seen. The mother throws her chest out, and her shoulders back. The baby will try to do the same thing.

Dr. Clending will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Poor posture may be due to trouble with the feet or legs, causing a tilt to the pelvis, and hence a curved position for the spine. Bow-legs and knock-knees should be treated on advice from the doctor. Don't let them run on. All babies' legs are bowed at first, but when they begin to crawl and walk they straighten up. Rickets may cause bow-legs; hence a regulation of the diet helps posture.

Strong muscles and strong bones are the best guarantees of good posture. Exercise of all the muscles and joints should be carried out systematically. With the baby in bed, move the legs—knees, hips and ankles. Lift him up by his fingers. Put him on his face and raise his legs so that the back is moved in all directions. He will think it is great fun.

What is the treatment of fallen stomach?

There is no set place for the organs inside the abdomen. When one considers the number and variety of the abdominal organs and the flexibility of the abdominal wall, it is no wonder that displacements are common.

Fallen stomach, which is always associated with dropped intestines, gives symptoms of dyspepsia in which distaste for food is a prominent symptom, with constipation and bloating regular accompaniments.

Mechanical derangements being best treated by mechanical means, enteroptosis, which is the technical name for dropping of the abdominal organs, is no exception to this rule. Exercises to strengthen the sagging abdominal walls, and a full diet to put extra "padding" inside the abdomen around the organs are plainly sensible methods of treatment. Mechanical support of the abdomen by corsets is strongly advised.

"I have known patients," wrote Dr. William Hanna Thomson, of New York, "who have been so reduced that they were unable to attend to their ordinary duties of life, with general impairment of health and nutrition who were restored by the employment of a belt to a condition of excellent health. One patient wore a belt fourteen months, gained 40 pounds in weight, and was completely cured."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

N. S. B.: "What is laryngitis? What is the treatment? Is a long drawn out case dangerous?"

Answer: Laryngitis is an inflammation of the vocal cords or of the cartilaginous box (larynx) in which the vocal cords are placed. It may be acute or chronic. The acute cases are usually due to a germ, like the common cold, and go away without very much treatment. Hot applications to the throat give relief and hot gargles do also. In more stubborn cases the application of a weak solution of silver nitrate to the exact spot inside the throat where the inflammation exists is the method usually practiced by physicians to bring the case to a termination. Other causes of laryngitis of a more chronic nature include tuberculosis and for that reason the question "Is a long drawn out case dangerous?" would indicate that an investigation along these lines should be done.

Reader: "What would you advise for a person who has eczema that is brought on by contact with strong soap, turpentine or paint? Can this be cured by any kind of diet?"

Answer: No. Obviously it is a contact form of eczema. The way to prevent it is to use rubber gloves if it is necessary to come in contact with the offending substances.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clending has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. THE CHARACTERS:
BENJAMIN MERRIFIELD, aged capitalist, hires
GAYLE DIXON to make love to his grandson.
JEREMY TUCKER, a shy student of archeology, while
BILL BAILEY and six pretty girls are employed to help bring life and youth to the Merrifield mansion.

YESTERDAY: Bill Bailey takes on the task of trying to learn who committed the jewel robbery at the Merrifield party.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

GAYLE SLEPT but little that night. She barely remembered seeing the party break up, although she hoped she had shown presence of mind enough to say gracious good nights. Most of the last courtship was directed at Jeremy Tucker, anyway, since he was the honored one.

She was awake at dawn and she dressed at once and went downstairs. But she didn't get her hoped-for chance to think alone.

"Good morning!" Mr. Merrifield spoke heartily, surprising her from behind a stone column on the porch. "Up so soon after the party?"

"Oh! Good morning!"
"You'll have breakfast with me? In just a minute or two now."

She had to agree. And it was pleasant, really, eating with him and enjoying his kindly courtesy. He pulled out her chair for her, and said grace for the two of them, and served her from the big bowl of cereal that was placed before them, and poured cream for her, and otherwise was courtly. She couldn't help loving the old man.

She wished he were her own grandfather. She had never had one, could barely remember her own father, in fact.

The sociability here made her all the more determined to keep the new worry away from his ears. As soon as she could she went quietly to the maid, the butler, and to Bill Bailey and pledged them anew to secrecy in the matter of the theft of last evening.

"After all, it was only a thousand dollar loss, and there was insurance," she said. "The Twys are well to do. Don't upset Mr. Merrifield or dear old Mr. Wacems."

"Right," said Bill. "But I've been thinking, I've got some ideas."

"I think I know something. Maybe not, but I'm going to play my hunch, on my own."

"Tell me!"
"Not now. Wait'll I'm sure."

"Bill Bailey, I hate you!" Last night you said you were in love and then you shut up about it. Now this!"

He smiled back at her, tousled her hair quickly and ducked to avoid a blow she aimed at him.

They hadn't much time for teasing and cutting up, however, because preparations for the play, "Maid to Measure," had to be completed fast. First it was necessary to prepare the theater itself. Folding chairs were rented, and this Wednesday morning Bill supervised placing them in the two big ballrooms even while rehearsal was under way. A few properties had to be borrowed, and he himself had to paint some scenery for Act 2. It was an odd scene, and by using shrub cuttings nailed to portable floor boards they could do wonders; but a backdrop of blue sky was necessary to make the artificial sunlight realistic. Bill stretched the canvas and put on the blue.

Bill, too, had arbitrarily re-written the play in small measure, so as to include just one main male part and two lesser ones. One of the lesser he had forced on Jeremy; the other he would play himself, doubling after playing the male lead. And he had written in two minor feminine roles so that all six of the girls, in addition to Gayle, could be accommodated.

"We've got to keep in mind the fact that these girls are hired to do little 'theater work,'" Bill told Gayle privately. "Mr. Merrifield ordered me to keep them busy. He ordered you and me to draw Jeremy out of his shell, and a crowd of girls around him is the best way to combat his shyness. He'll get used to feminine beauty in time. I hope."

"Surely, Bill. We're making progress already. He enjoyed the party."

"Did you?"
"Yes. Until the—the—"

"I know. It's a shame."

"Where's Jeremy now?"
"Out on the lawn—guess what doing?"

"Meditating?"
"Wrong!"

Gayle stopped her work—she had been memorizing the last of her play script and she laid it aside now—to look excitedly at Bill.

"Tell me!"
"The Tempe person. Four eyes. I think those glasses she wears are a bond of respectability between them, even though she refuses a lot. She likes him."

"So! Well, Jeremy's not bad, really, Bill. I can understand how Tempe feels."

Bill didn't answer that. He looked quickly, and seriously, at his associate. He remembered that Jeremy had kissed Gayle with quite unnecessary ardor only a few days ago, and he didn't like Gayle to be too pleased about the Merrifield heir.

"Listen, Gayle, you—" But he halted abruptly. After all, a man can't come out and say he loves a girl, but wants her to wait a year to discuss it. He was tied up with promises, obligations, moral and otherwise. His promised task was, in fact, to make Jeremy fall for Gayle herself. He had all but forgotten that!

"Sure!" he changed his tone. "Jeremy's swell, Gayle. I think he likes you. You—you mustn't let this Hyde gal overdo her act. Never can tell what might happen. You're supposed to—to—"

"I know. Make him woo me. But I've been awfully busy."

"Scram right now, and give him some attention."

That seemed advisable. She hadn't talked to Jeremy all morning, and the hour was almost noon. She went outside and broke into her tete-a-tete with Tempe. She felt that Tempe was just kidding as usual, teasing and doing whatever she could for self-entertainment, and so she could take Jeremy away smoothly.

But, surprisingly, it didn't work out that way.

Gayle threw herself into the mood of surface gaiety and did manage to edge Jeremy away—but when she turned to stick out her tongue at the smaller girl, purely in a gesture of teasing and comradeship, she saw that Tempe's anger was aroused.

This fact was startling. She had never seen Tempe angry. Tempe voiced no objection now; indeed, she smiled quickly and her expression changed, but there had been a tell-tale moment in which her eyes revealed much. She spoke lightly to them and hastened away, but Gayle wondered—

"I'm jittery from last night, and am imagining things without real cause," she told herself. Doubtless the apparent flash of meanness in Tempe's eyes and face was purely imaginary, she insisted now. She turned determinedly to the shy young man.

"I want to hear if you enjoyed the party, Jeremy."

"It was very nice."

"I'm glad. Meet any people you liked? Any girls?"

"I—I—oh, yes. Yes. But—"

"Uh huh! Who?"

"I was going to say—the girls already here—Miss Hyde, Lola—"

"They are darlings," Gayle finally finished for him. "I'm so glad you can enjoy them. Or, us, I should say. At least, I hope you like me, too. I want to be friends, Jeremy."

"Oh! Oh, Gayle!"

There was no mistaking his tone. He looked longingly at her, but fearfully, too. Gayle had to suppress a smile. Poor Jeremy was a scared rabbit at times, in all truth. She couldn't help contrasting his manner with aggressive Bill Bailey. Bill would jam his head in a lion's mouth if he thought the experience might be interesting. And yet—about Jeremy was a quiet, subtle charm of his own. His very innocence and shyness were somehow appealing. Gayle wondered if it were just maternal sympathy that he stirred in her.

She had lunch with Jeremy, alone, and they talked pleasantly if without excitement. They lingered for an hour or more after lunch. Gayle could have called it loafing except that she knew she was hired to do exactly what she was doing. It was cheerful and they were not interrupted until nearly 2 p. m., when Bill Bailey drove up in one of the Merrifield cars, left it in the side driveway and came running to her.

"Kid, every ticket is sold!" he exclaimed. "Even those at the jewelry store. We'll have a full house for 'Maid to Measure,' at a dollar and a half a seat! The whole town's talking about us!"

She could only smile up at him appreciatively. There was something fine—something endearing about Bill Bailey when he was in a welter of enthusiasm. For the remainder of the day she quite forgot to worry about the robbery last night.

Preceding the tanks, Nazi airplanes rout French reinforcements and bomb truck trains off the highways. Never before has the world seen such modern mechanization. It has completely upset the strategy of warfare. In the old days, a valley was an excellent channel through which troops could advance. But today, an airplane sweeps up a valley, catching the enemy in a pocket, and bombs or machine guns them in every direction.

Training Posture—Begin With Infancy
By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WHAT CAN be done to train posture during infancy?

● The beginnings of bad posture are laid during very early life. Always hold a baby so that its back is supported. A cramped position may start to make the back crooked. Round shoulders may begin by clothes that pull on the neck and shoulders.

Example is the best teacher. Babies are great imitators. When they begin to walk, if the mother or father is stooped or round-shouldered, they will tend to do the same. Once or twice a day, in the formative period when the baby is from eighteen months to two years old, stand him up against the wall, the mother on the wall around the corner where she can be seen. The mother throws her chest out, and her shoulders back. The baby will try to do the same thing.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Poor posture may be due to trouble with the feet or legs, causing a tilt to the pelvis, and hence a curved position for the spine. Bow-legs and knock-knees should be treated on advice from the doctor. Don't let them run on. All babies' legs are bowed at first, but when they begin to crawl and walk they straighten up. Rickets may cause bow-legs; hence a regulation of the diet helps posture.

Strong muscles and strong bones are the best guarantees of good posture. Exercise of all the muscles and joints should be carried out systematically. With the baby in bed, move the legs—knees, hips and ankles. Lift him up by his fingers. Put him on his face and raise his legs so that the back is moved in all directions. He will think it is great fun.

What is the treatment of fallen stomach?

There is no set place for the organs inside the abdomen. When one considers the number and variety of the abdominal organs and the flexibility of the abdominal wall, it is no wonder that displacements are common.

Fallen stomach, which is always associated with dropped intestines, gives symptoms of dyspepsia in which distaste for food is a prominent symptom, with constipation and bloating regular accompaniments.

Mechanical derangements being best treated by mechanical means, enteroptosis, which is the technical name for dropping of the abdominal organs, is no exception to this rule. Exercises to strengthen the sagging abdominal walls, and a full diet to put extra "padding" inside the abdomen around the organs are plainly sensible methods of treatment. Mechanical support of the abdomen by corsets is strongly advised.

"I have known patients," wrote Dr. William Hanna Thomson, of New York, "who have been so retarded that they were unable to attend to their ordinary duties of life, with general impairment of health and nutrition who were restored by the employment of a belt to a condition of excellent health. One patient wore a belt fourteen months, gained 40 pounds in weight, and was completely cured."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
N. S. B.: "What is laryngitis? What is the treatment? Is a long drawn out case dangerous?"

Answer: Laryngitis is an inflammation of the vocal cords or the cartilaginous box (larynx) in which the vocal cords are placed. It may be acute or chronic. The acute cases are usually due to a germ, like the common cold, and go away without very much treatment. Hot applications to the throat give relief and not gargles do also. In more stubborn cases the application of a weak solution of silver nitrate to the exact spot inside the throat where the inflammation exists is the method usually practiced by physicians to bring the case to a termination. Other causes of laryngitis are a more chronic nature include tuberculosis and for that reason the question "Is a long drawn out case dangerous?" would indicate that an investigation along these lines should be done.

Reader: "What would you advise for a person who has eczema that is brought on by contact with strong soap, turpentine or paint? Can this be cured by any kind of diet?"

Answer: No. Obviously it is a contact form of eczema. The way to prevent it is to use rubber gloves if it is necessary to come in contact with the offending substances.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

SYNOPSIS

THE CHARACTERS:
BENJAMIN MERRIFIELD, aged capitalist, hires
GAYLE DIXON to make love to his grandson,
JEREMY TUCKER, a shy student of archeology, while
BILL BAILEY and six pretty girls are employed to help bring life and youth to the Merrifield mansion.

YESTERDAY, Bill Bailey takes on the task of trying to learn who committed the jewel robbery at the Merrifield party.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

GAYLE SLEPT but little that night. She barely remembered seeing the party break up, although she hoped she had shown presence of mind enough to say gracious good nights. Most of the last courtesy was directed at Jeremy Tucker, anyway, since he was the honored one.

She was awake at dawn and she dressed at once and went downstairs. But she didn't get her hoped-for chance to think alone.

"Good morning!" Mr. Merrifield spoke heartily, surprising her from behind a stone column on the porch. "Up so soon after the party?"

"Oh! Good morning!"

"You'll have breakfast with me? In just a minute or two now."

She had to agree. And it was pleasant, really, eating with him and enjoying his kindly courtesy. He pulled out her chair for her, and said grace for the two of them, and served her from the big bowl of cereal that was placed before them, and poured cream for her, and otherwise was courtly. She couldn't help loving the old man. She wished he were her own grandfather. She had never had one, could barely remember her own father, in fact.

The sociability here made her all the more determined to keep the new worry away from his ears. As soon as she could she went quietly to the maid, the butler, and to Bill Bailey and pledged them anew to secrecy in the matter of the theft of last evening.

"After all, it was only a thousand dollar loss, and there was insurance," she said. "The Twys are well to do. Don't upset Mr. Merrifield, or dear old Mr. Weems."

"Right," said Bill. "But I've been thinking. I've got some ideas."

"What, Bill?"

"I think I know something. Maybe not, but I'm going to play my hunch, on my own."

"Tell me!"

"Not now. Wait! I'll be sure."

"Bill Bailey, I hate you! Last night you said you were in love and then you shut up about it. Now this!"

He smiled back at her, tousled her hair quickly and ducked to avoid a blow she aimed at him.

They hadn't much time for teasing and cutting up, however, because preparations for the play, "Maid to Measure," had to be completed fast. First it was necessary to prepare the theater itself. Folding chairs were rented, and this Wednesday morning Bill supervised placing them in the two big ballrooms even while rehearsal was under way. A few properties had to be borrowed, and he himself had to paint some scenery for Act 2. It was an outdoor scene, and by using shrub cuttings nailed to portable floor boards they could do wonders; but a backdrop of blue sky was necessary to make the artificial sunlight realistic. Bill stretched the canvas and put on the blue.

Bill, too, had arbitrarily re-written the play in small measure, so as to include just one main male part and two lesser ones. One of the lesser he had forced on Jeremy; the other he would play himself, doubling after playing the male lead. And he had written in two minor feminine roles so that all six of the girls, in addition to Gayle, could be accommodated.

"We've got to keep in mind the fact that these girls are hired to do Little Theater work," Bill told Gayle privately. "Mr. Merrifield ordered me to keep them busy. He ordered you and me to draw Jeremy out of his shell, and a crowd of girls around him is the best way to combat his shyness. He'll get used to feminine beauty in time. I hope."

"Surely, Bill. We're making progress already. He enjoyed the party."

"Did you?"

"Yes. Until the—the—"

"I know. It's a shame."

"Where's Jeremy now?"

"Out on the lawn—guess what doing?"

"Meditating?"

"Woofing!"

Gayle stopped her work—she had been memorizing the last of her play script and she laid it aside now—to look excitedly at Bill.

"Tell me!"

"The Tempe person. Four eyes. I think those glasses she wears are a bond of respectability between them, even though she refuses a lot. She likes him."

"So! Well, Jeremy's not bad, really, Bill. I can understand how Tempe feels."

Bill didn't answer that. He looked quickly, and seriously, at his associate. He remembered that Jeremy had kissed Gayle with quite unnecessary ardor only a few days ago, and he didn't like Gayle to be too pleased about the Merrifield heir.

"Listen, Gayle, you—"

But he halted abruptly. After all, a man can't come out and say he loves a girl, but wants her to wait a year to discuss it. He was tied up with promises, obligations, moral and otherwise. His promised task was, in fact, to make Jeremy fall for Gayle herself. He had all but forgotten that!

"Sure!" he changed his tone. "Jeremy's swell, Gayle. I think he likes you. You—you mustn't let this Hyde gal overdo her act. Never can tell what might happen. You're supposed to—"

"I know. Make him woo me. But I've been awfully busy."

"Scram right now, and give him some attention!"

That seemed advisable. She hadn't talked to Jeremy all morning, and the hour was almost noon. She went outside and broke into his tete-a-tete with Tempe. She felt that Tempe was just kidding as usual, teasing and doing whatever she could for self-entertainment, and so she could take Jeremy away smoothly.

But, surprisingly, it didn't work out that way. Gayle threw herself into the mood of surface gaiety and did manage to edge Jeremy away—but when she turned to stick out her tongue at the smaller girl, purely in a gesture of teasing and comradeship, she saw that Tempe's anger was aroused.

This fact was startling. She had never seen Tempe angry. Tempe voiced no objection now; indeed, she smiled quickly and her expression changed, but there had been a tell-tale moment in which her eyes revealed much. She spoke lightly to them and hastened away, but Gayle wondered—

"I'm jittery from last night, and am imagining things without real cause," she told herself. Doubtless the apparent flash of meanness in Tempe's eyes and face was purely imaginary, she insisted now. She turned determinedly to the shy young man.

"I want to hear if you enjoyed the party, Jeremy."

"It was very nice."

"I'm glad. Meet any people you liked? Any girls?"

"I—oh, yes. Yes. But—"

"Uh huh! Well?"

"I was going to say—the girls already here—Miss Hyde, Lola—"

"They are darlings!" Gayle finally finished for him. "I'm so glad you can enjoy them. Or us, I should say. At least, I hope you like me, too. I want to be friends, Jeremy."

"Oh! Oh, Gayle!"

There was no mistaking his tone. He looked longingly at her, but fearfully, too. Gayle had to suppress a smile. Poor Jeremy was a scared rabbit at times, in all truth. She couldn't help contrasting his manner with aggressive Bill Bailey.

Bill would jam his head in a lion's mouth if he thought the experience might be interesting. And yet—about Jeremy was a quiet, subtle charm of his own. His very innocence and shyness were somehow appealing. Gayle wondered if it were just maternal sympathy that he stirred in her.

She had lunch with Jeremy, alone, and they talked pleasantly if without excitement. They lingered for an hour or more after lunch. Gayle could have called it loafing except that she knew she was hired to do exactly what she was doing. It was cheerful and they were not interrupted until nearly 2 p. m., when Bill Bailey drove up in one of the Merrifield cars, left it in the side driveway and came running to her.

"Kid, every ticket is sold!" he exclaimed. "Even those at the jewelry store. We'll have a full house for 'Maid to Measure,' at a dollar and a half a seat! The whole town's talking about us!"

She could only smile up at him appreciatively. There was something fine—something endearing about Bill Bailey when he was in a welter of enthusiasm. For the remainder of the day she quite forgot to worry about the robbery last night.

Conservation League Tea Marks Fifth Anniversary

G. D. Phillips Home Scene; Committees Are Named

The annual officers' tea of the Child Conservation League had a special significance Tuesday at the home of Mrs. G. D. Phillips, Beverly Road, as it marked the fifth year of the organization. The guest speaker for the occasion was Dr. Florence Mateer of Columbus, a child psychologist, who heads her own school, The Merryheart, of that city.

Dr. Mateer discussed informally how parents may prevent normal children from becoming problem children. She told of many obstacles that parents meet in rearing children and cited cases handled by herself.

As this was the last meeting of the year, Mrs. Phillips received the year reports of Mrs. Don Walker, secretary, and Mrs. Ralph Wallace, treasurer, and gave her own report of the year's activities.

In recognition of the fifth anniversary, Mrs. J. I. Smith, Jr., read the minutes of the first meeting and Mrs. Clark Will, the first League president, gave a resume of the accomplishments and undertakings of the group.

Mrs. Tom Renick, incoming president, then took the chair and named several committees to function during the summer. For the July picnic, the committee includes Mrs. Emmitt Crist, Mrs. Phillips and Mrs. J. E. Groom. The August picnic committee is comprised of Mrs. F. K. Blair, Mrs. Luther Bower and Mrs. Karl Mason. She also appointed an investigating committee to handle the summer correspondence of the Clare Tree Major play company. This committee includes Mrs. Sterling Lamb, Mrs. Don Walker and Mrs. Bishop Given.

The out-going officers, Mrs. Phillips, Mrs. Ted Huston, Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Wallace and Mrs. Crist, were hostesses at a delightful tea party after the program.

Centering the table in the dining room was a lovely miniature Maypole, with a dainty May Basket filled with spring flowers at the end of each streamer.

Mrs. Renick presided at the tea service and Mrs. Phillips served.

Conservation League Tea Marks Fifth Anniversary

G. D. Phillips Home Scene; Committees Are Named

The annual officers' tea of the Child Conservation League had a special significance Tuesday at the home of Mrs. G. D. Phillips, Beverly Road, as it marked the fifth year of the organization. The guest speaker for the occasion was Dr. Florence Mateer of Columbus, a child psychologist, who heads her own school, The Merryheart, of that city.

Dr. Mateer discussed informally how parents may prevent normal children from becoming problem children. She told of many obstacles that parents meet in rearing children and cited cases handled by herself.

As this was the last meeting of the year, Mrs. Phillips received the year reports of Mrs. Don Walker, secretary, and Mrs. Ralph Wallace, treasurer, and gave her own report of the year's activities.

In recognition of the fifth anniversary, Mrs. J. I. Smith, Jr., read the minutes of the first meeting and Mrs. Clark Will, the first League president, gave a resume of the accomplishments and undertakings of the group.

Mrs. Tom Renick, incoming president, then took the chair and named several committees to function during the summer. For the July picnic, the committee includes Mrs. Emmitt Crist, Mrs. Phillips and Mrs. J. E. Groom. The August picnic committee is comprised of Mrs. F. K. Blair, Mrs. Luther Bower and Mrs. Karl Mason. She also appointed an investigating committee to handle the summer correspondence of the Clare Tree Major play company. This committee includes Mrs. Sterling Lamb, Mrs. Don Walker and Mrs. B. J. Hop Given.

The out-going officers, Mrs. Phillips, Mrs. Ted Huston, Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Wallace and Mrs. Crist, were hostesses at a delightful tea party after the program.

Centering the table in the dining room was a lovely miniature Maypole, with a dainty May Basket filled with spring flowers at the end of each streamer.

Mrs. Renick presided at the tea service and Mrs. Phillips served.

Library Notes

Saddle in the Sky—by H. J. Plenn. Doing for Texas what Carl Carmer's Stars Fell on Alabama did for that state, Mr. Plenn gives us not only history or legend or description of the contemporary scene, but a vigorous blend of the three, told in language as gusty as Texas air or the Texan character. Roaming widely and rapidly the author brings us the charm of the old south and frankness of the west; he pictures the hill-billies and sleepy plantations of eastern Texas, the cattle country west of the Pecos, the fiesta atmosphere of Brownsville, the oil-boom towns of the Panhandle, and cosmopolitan San Antonio that blends the Mexican, Negro, Indian, and American ways of life.

Failure of a Mission—by Neville M. Henderson. This unique personal narrative, a combination of autobiography and history by the British ambassador to Berlin 1937-39 reveals for the first time the dramatic details of the coming of the Second World War as seen by one on the inside. A book upon which later historians will base much history.

Fish and Sea Foods Cook Book—by Cora, Rose and Bob Brown. With modern refrigeration used extensively, fish and seafood for the everyday menu has become increasingly popular. Your mouth will water when the Browns tell you how to combine scallops, shrimp, oysters in a Boquet De Mer, and how to stuff one fish with another. An entire section is devoted to camp recipes, but still more popular and helpful are the clear and simple directions for the woman cook confronted with 150 kinds of fish each requiring special treatment. There are over 400 recipes which add scores of new dishes to the menu.

An Ozark Anthology—by Vance Randolph. A many-sided view into the picturesque Ozark mountain country where old American stock with their generation-old customs and traditions hold forth from the rest of progressive America and retain an old way of living. The country and the people furnish material for many writers of whom many have contributed to this anthology. Among the contributors are MacKinlay Kantor, Rose Wilder Lane, Thomas Williamson, Charles M. Wilson, Nancy Clemens, and George Milburn.

and part of Belgium. That push illustrates the high degree of Nazi mechanization. They sent airplanes ahead instead of the cavalry of old. Then come Nazi super-tanks. Then armored cars, followed by armored trucks filled with troops. Thus, the entire German army moves at the rate of 200 miles a day instead of at the snail-like pace of the last war when twelve miles daily was excellent speed for the infantry.

NOTE—It was only two years ago that the U. S. Chief of Staff referred to the "foot soldier" as the backbone of the American army. Two other factors beside mechanization have been important in Nazi success. One has been a new type of high explosive which seems able to crack the steel and cement fortifications of the Maginot Line more than anything the Allies have perfected.

The other is the Hitler psychology of invincibility which has terrorized smaller countries. For instance, U. S. army intelligence has no idea as yet whether Hitler has a secret new weapon or not, as boasted in Berlin.

But this doesn't make any difference. The mere report of the weapon has been effective. Rumors about a nerve-gas have spread terror to all the smaller countries. The Balkans which a few days ago were ready to fight, now look like a push-over. They figure that Hitler is invincible, almost supernatural.

FRENCH GENERALS

There have been two schools of thought inside the French army regarding the defense of the Republic. One was the strategy used during the world war—that the best defense was to attack despite heavy loss of life.

The other school was developed after the war by General Gamelin—namely, that the best defense was in tremendous fortresses. This strategy erected the Maginot Line, and was behind the Gamelin policy of conserving manpower, waiting for the enemy to attack, figuring that France could sit out the war.

Leaders of the old theory, that the best defense is to counter-attack, are General Weygand in command of the French army in Syria, and General Georges, the French Chief-of-Staff. The latter was shot through the lungs when King Alexander of Yugoslavia was assassinated, and for many months was given up as unable to recover. He is now one of the most potent generals in France. It was generally expected that Gamelin, now getting old, would have stepped aside some time ago in favor of General Georges.

Both Georges and Weygand were the star officers of Marshall Foch in the last war. Weygand is dynamic, restless, has been worried over lack of French activity. Twice he flew to Paris from Syria, was reported to have offered his resignation twice in disgust at French dalliance in the Near East.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Cost of the now deflated Garner boom for President ran into big figures, according to Mrs. Clara Driscoll, Texas Democratic National Committeewoman. She has told friends that the total was $165,000. . . . The profit column of the government-owned Inland Waterways Corporation is beginning to look up under Chester Thompson, new head of the agency. March report shows $45,000 profit as compared to a $51,309 loss for the same month in 1939. . . . Thompson has put an end to previous labor difficulties by signing agreements with various unions. . . . If you want to read a sizzling book on politics, get the recently published "Rascals in Democracy" by veteran Kansas political writer W. G. Clugston. . . . Mrs. Key Pittman, wife of the dapper chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, takes wifely pride in her husband's position. Pointing to his chair, she told a group of sight-seeing friends, "There is one of the most important seats in the Capitol."

Library Notes

Saddle in the Sky—by H. J. Pienn. Doing for Texas, what Carl Carmer's Stars Fell on Alabama did for that state, Mr. Pienn gives us not only history or legend or description of the contemporary scene, but a vigorous blend of the three, told in language as glib as Texas air or the Texan character. Roaming widely and rapidly the author brings us the charm of the old south and frankness of the west; he pictures the hill-billies and sleepy plantations of eastern Texas, the cattle country west of the Pecos, the fiesta atmosphere of Brownsville, the oil-boom towns of the Panhandle, and cosmopolitan San Antonio that blends the Mexican, Negro, Indian, and American ways of life.

Failure of a Mission—by Neville M. Henderson. This unique personal narrative, a combination of autobiography and history by the British ambassador to Berlin 1937-39 reveals for the first time the dramatic details of the coming of the Second World War as seen by one on the inside. A book upon which later historians will base much history.

Fish and Sea Foods Cook Book—by Cora, Rose and Bob Brown. With modern refrigeration used extensively, fish and seafood for the everyday menu has become increasingly popular. Your mouth will water when the Browns tell you how to combine scallops, shrimp, oysters in a Bouquet De Mer, and how to stuff one fish with another. An entire section is devoted to camp recipes, but still more popular and helpful are the clear and simple directions for the woman cook confronted with 150 kinds of fish each requiring special treatment. There are over 400 recipes which add scores of new dishes to the menu.

An Ozark Anthology—by Vance Randolph. A many-sided view into the picturesque Ozark mountain country where old American stock with their generation-old customs and traditions hold forth from the rest of progressive America and retain an old way of living. The country and the people furnish material for many writers of whom many have contributed to this anthology. Among the contributors are MacKinlay Kantor, Rose Wilder Lane, Thames Williamson, Charles M. Wilson, Nancy Clemens, and George Milburn.

NEW HOLLAND WATERWORKS PROJECT VOTE DEPENDS ON RECOUNT

WEST PRECINCT TO BE CHECKED AFTER PETITION

Some Persons Declare They Opposed Bond Issue, But Ballots Not Counted

FAYETTE BOARD TO ACT

Supporters Plan Another Move In Case Appeal Is Successful

The fate of the New Holland waterworks project was in the hands of the Fayette County Board of Elections Wednesday after a group of residents of the village petitioned for a recount of ballots cast for and against a $15,000 bond issue in the election May 14.

The recount is scheduled for Friday at 8 p. m. in Washington C. H.

The tabulation of the vote in West Holland, the Fayette County part of the village of New Holland, showed 47 for the bond issue and only one against. Several residents of the precinct have informed election board officials that they voted against the issue, but that their votes were apparently not counted.

The total vote cast on the question was 225 for and 112 against, more than the necessary 65 percent required for a bond issue. If much error is found in the West Holland precinct, it is possible that the issue may be defeated.

Another Check Planned

However, supporters of the waterworks believe that they still have a chance to be victorious even if the West Holland recount should be against the interests of the project. They have conferred with Pickaway County Board of Elections officials and have declared that if the recount defeats the issue they will ask for a recount of one of the New Holland precincts where they believe error may have entered into the checking of the ballot. This step will not be taken unless the West Holland recount defeats the proposal.

Supporters of the bond issue have until Saturday to file their request with the Pickaway County board, that date being five days after certification of the vote. The vote was certified by the election board last Monday. Villagers will have time to learn the outcome of the West Holland recount and then take action before their deadline is passed.

Petitioners Listed

Persons petitioning for the recount in West Holland are Jessie Petty, Mattie Ater, Nelson Orihood, Frank B. Renick, Audrey Renick, Nelson Renick, Joe Coy, Marie Sutton, Mary Manbeavers, Walter E. Petty, Harvey Renick and Ivan Ater. All are residents of the West Holland precinct.

Bookmobile Of Library To Participate In Big Cincinnati Convention

Pickaway County has one of the bookmobiles that will be featured in the parade of Ohio book trucks in connection with the sixty-second annual convention of the American Library Association convention in Cincinnati, May 26 to June 1.

"Development Within the States" is the theme of the conference which will be attended by approximately 3,000 librarians, trustees, and friends of libraries from all parts of the United States, Canada, and foreign countries.

At least 14 and perhaps 20 of these book caravans will be included in the Ohio bookmobile parade through downtown Cincinnati May 30.

Last year the Circleville public library book truck traveled 19,072 miles and circulated 87,029 books.

Paul A. T. Noon, Ohio State librarian, reports that 18 bookmobiles in 17 counties traveled 171,861 miles in 1939, circulating 1,512,325 books.

In 1935, only five bookmobiles were in operation, most of them in such counties as Cuyahoga and Hamilton. Today, Pickaway is

POPPIES ARRIVE FOR AUXILIARY SALE SATURDAY

Bright red poppies, crepe paper replicas of the famous poppies of Flanders Fields, fill Legion headquarters here today as the women of the American Legion Auxiliary prepare for the annual observance of Poppy Day on Saturday.

The poppies were received from Sandusky where they were made by disabled World War veterans. They show the patient and devoted work of these men who made them in remembrance of their departed comrades. All hand-made, the flowers vary slightly according to the skill of the veterans.

"Poppy-making means much to the disabled veterans," explained Mrs. Melvin Mettler, Poppy Day chairman. "For those in the hospitals, it provides an interesting occupation to fill the long hours of illness and convalescence. It has high value as occupational therapy, helping the men speed their recovery. It gives them the encouraging experience of again earning money and of being able to send money home to help support their families.

"The poppy workrooms maintained by the Auxiliary in a number of states, provide employment for disabled men outside the hospitals who are unable to do other work. For them the poppy work is an eagerly sought relief from unhappy idleness, from the almost hopeless search for a job their limited strength can perform, and a means of supporting themselves and families."

The disabled veterans are the only persons who receive pay for poppy work. The Auxiliary women who handle and distribute the flowers serve as unpaid volunteers, all contributions received on Poppy Day going to support Legion and Auxiliary efforts for the disabled and the needy families of veterans.
